A.F.L. Union Again Talks Strike

Thinking Out Loud

By H. M. L.

It is interesting to read another article on aviation by Major Alexander P. deSeversky, in the current issue of Mercury, and then to turn to the newspaper and read the accounts of the dramtic battle of Crete. The title of deSeversky's article itself carries a spine tingling sensation of alarm for all the olsters of this world. The title is "Twilight of Sea Power." The inferences to be drawn from his discussion is that when the great battleships of 45,000 tons or more are completed for the United States in 1946, as a weapon they will be as defunct as the dodo. While he admits that sea power today still plays an important role in war, he points to the swift advances being made in the development of aircraft. Bombers with 8,000 miles range that even now can fly across the Atlantic with a tremendous load of bombs, discharge them, and return without once landing for fuel.

The air, declares deSeversky, is over all the planet, while the seas are only between the lands. That nation which establishes supremacy in the air ultimately will take all other nations if it so desires. The victorious air force commands both land and sea, and at today's rate of development, in perhaps five years, can command the surrender of any land or sea force, or wreak upon them total destruction in case of refusal. DeSeversky looks forward to the time in only a few years, when planes, non-stop, will fly the 25,000 miles around the earth at the equator.

He admits that in the imperfect stage of war aviation today, other factors play an important role, but he points out that even the most cursory examination of the achievements of air forces in the present war, indicates clearly its coming dominance as a war weapon. The article was written some weeks ago, undoubtedly before the German aerial attack on the British in Crete began, but events there tend to corroborate de Seversky's forecast. All advices indicate that the Germans now have command of the air over Crete. The British have withdrawn their air squadrons due to a lack of airports, or because such fields as they still hold are too rutted with bomb explosions for safe landings. In fact the fields are in such bad shape that on the single air field the Germans hold, their planes are wrecked in their own bomb holes.

The fact is, of course, the German air force has not yet reached that stage of development which deSeversky declares will be here within five years. The Germans have tried to augment their air invasion with ships loaded with troops, and that has again proved that the British navy is still master on water. If, however, the Germans had enough air transports, enough trained parachutists, and arms of the right kind, there is little question that in time they could overwhelm the British forces. Of course, in time they may, though at this moment it looks as if the British would wear out the German invaders.

The terrible price the Germans are paying, a price measured in thousands of lifes, the destruction of their best trained and most resourceful troops, appalls the imagination. And we wonder whether deSeversky in forecasting the overwhelming might of air armies, has not neglected to take into account improvements in land defenses. As one reviews his discussion, the absence of any speculation on what defenses forces on land may develop in the way of counter measures to air invasion, is strikingly noticeable. Even now, it may be, the hard driven British and Greek troops on Crete may be evolving a system of counter attack, that in the future, will doom invaders except under surprise conditions, to certain death. De Seversky may well forecast a time near at hand when air armadas will be the major weapon in war.

Mrs. Sarah Bigelow, Esteemed Local Woman, Died Here Yesterday

DEATH CAME SUDDENLY AND AS DISTINCT SHOCK TO RELATIVES AND FRIENDS

Sarah Frances Bigelow, esteemed resident of this city since 1908 and wife of R. L. P. Bigelow, retired Tahoe National Forest supervisor, died suddenly at the Bigelow home on Broad street yesterday. The death followed a stroke. It came as a severe shock to relatives and friends.

The funeral services for Mrs. Bigelow will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Episcopal Church with Rev. H. Thomas Pateman officiating. The funeral will be under the direction of the Holmes Funeral Home.

Mrs. Bigelow was a native of England but spent her childhood in New Zealand. She became the wife of R. L. P. Bigelow in Fresno on May 3, 1903. When Bigelow assumed charge of the Tahoe National Forest in 1908 they moved to Nevada City and had made their home here ever since.

The deceased took an active part in the Episcopal Church and Trinity Guild. She was fond of flowers and delighted in working in her garden.

Besides the husband, Mrs. Bigelow leaves a daughter, Mrs. Gwendolyn Anderson of this city and three grandchildren, Dorothy Jean Anderson, Richard Anderson and Grace Anderson, all of Nevada City.

Mrs. Chan of Grass Valley will speak on the topic: "Chinese Women in Business, Professions and Industry." The clubs choral groups, under the direction of Mrs. Charles Elliott, will render several songs.

Union Charges Discrimination Against Members Following Return To Jobs Last Tuesday

Open hosiilities between the American Federation of Labor and Idaho-Maryland, New Brunswick and Scotia Mines was at least avoided for another week last night, when the AFL unionists, at a meeting in Grass Valley, postponed until next Sunday action on charges the companies are discriminating against AFL members, who had been on strike 18 days prior to resumption of work at the mines last Tuesday.

Approximately 400 men were present at last night's meeting. For three hours a discussion was held on the asserted discrimination acts, miners reporting they were discharged for no other apparent reason than that they were active with the new AFL union.

The Idaho-Maryland Company, however, denied the charges of discrimination. It was announced a number of men were discharged for refusing to work with employees who had continued on the job during the strike; had refused to ride in the same trucks with miners who passed the AFL picket line and for refusing to cooperate with them in ordinary mining operations, thereby slowing up production. It was also understood some were discharged for threats against employees who had passed thepicket line.

Omar F. Hoskins, federal conciliator, in a talk to the miners before they voted to return to work, told them discrimination was a two-way sword, that it could be used by both the employees and employer alike. Observers believe the present difficulty is a case of the shoe being on the other foot but that the mine operators are firmly standing on their right to direct their employees in operating the mines and are maintaining discipline.

At last night's meeting, the AFL named an executive board, consisting of D. V. Wooley, Albert Hauseman, Walter R. Jensen, Leonard Thompson and Henry Everett. It was reported 41 new members were initiated .

It is understood the discharged men at the mines will file charges of discrimination against the companies with the National Labor Relations Board. It was reported this action will be as individuals and not through the AFL organization. The NLRB had previously announced a hands off policy in the Nevada County gold mining industry inasmuch as a federal circuit court has ruled gold mining in this state is not interstate commerce.

Reports have been circulating during the past several days the Mine Workers Protective League, recognized bargaining agent for the Idaho-Maryland, New Brunswick and Scotia Mines, as well as other mines in the Grass Valley-Nevada City area, except the Lava Cap, intends to demand a closed shop and a 50 cent per day raise. President Olney Donnelly of the league today denied that such action was contemplated.

Down From Alleghany—

Joseph Sbaffi of Alleghany was a Nevada City visitor during the weekend.

PAINE RETURNS FROM MEETING

Robert Paine of this city has returned from the Young Republicans of California convention held in Santa Cruz.

Senator Phillips told the Young Republicans youth must lead the fight to maintain the democratic spirit in the state and called upon the voters to "forsake the rocking chair attitude which is allowing the government to slip out of the people's hands."

Senator Phillips said Governor Olson is attempting to establish a "new order in California."

CLASSIFICATION OF REGISTRANTS ENDS IN JUNE

The Selective Service Board is now meeting Thursday and Monday afternoons to classify registrants under the Selective Service Act. Questionaires are going out to registrants at the rate of 50 each day in the week, except Sunday, and the board classifies these as fast as they are returned. It is expected that the work of classification of the entire 2900 registants in Nevada County will be completed early in June.

Merle A. Morrison, clerk of the board, states that Nevada County has drawn a zero call for the eleventn quota call from Sacramento headquarters, and it now begins to look as if no more selectees will be called from this county until late in June or about the first of July. The county has provided 179 selectees and enlistments, as against the original quota for the county of but 149.

Tom Hogan of Alleghany is visiting in this city with relatives.

Bad Teeth, Criminal Record No Longer Bar To Training

Brigadier General J. O. Donovan, state director of selective service, today announced the modification of two factors which have been grounds for deferment from military service.

He said the modifications affect those men who have been deferred because of bad teeth and those who have been barred from military training because of statutory law violations.

Bridgework No Ban

He explained that under the new ruling artificial teeth which are attached by bridgework to sound teeth are considered to be serviceable, whether the bridgework is removeable or not. The army requires that a man must have three pairs of incisor or front teeth which meet and three pair of masticator or back teeth which meet to be placed in a 1A classification. A plate of false teeth is not acceptable.

In addition, the general said, men will be accepted for service if an examination of their mouths show that dental work could make them eligible for enlistment.

General Donovan added that a national program is being set up to acquaint young men as well as doctors and dentists with the qualifications necessary fo enlistment. He said this will give young men a chance to prepare themselves for induction before they are examined officially.

Felony Ban Changed

He pointed out that a revision of regulations has removed the sweeping disqualifications of all men who have been convicted of a felony. Instead, he said, debarment as felons is limited to perpetrators of certain heinous crimes and habitual criminals.

The heinous crimes listed include treason, murder, kidnaping, arson or those of a sexual nature or involving illegal dealing in narcotics.

In addition, the list provides for the rejection of men who have been convicted of two or more felonies, who are chronic offenders with pronounced criminal tendencies or those who are retained in the custody of any court of criminal jurisdiction or other civil authority.

Action Explained

General Donovan stated:

This modification will enable many patriotic young Americans who had been disbarred because of some youthful misstep to serve their nation in the ranks of her armed defenders It is just that it makes a proper discrimination between offenses that are merely violtations of statutory law and crimes which denote moral turpitude. It bars the criminal but it opens the door to the man who has atoned for and repented of an offense against society that is not generally accepted as a felony.

Don't Blame The Grocer

In spite of predictions to the contrary by some of the country's top economists, food prices are soaring, seeming to stay elusively just ahead of the family pay-check. If the man of the house gets a raise, straightaway the prices of butter leaps ahead, followed by milk and eggs and meat.

Caught in the middle, the tendency of the average man—and the average housewife who spends most of the pay-check—is to blame the first person in line—the merchant.

But prcies are sky-bound for reasons as far beyond the control of the grocer, the dairyman, the clothier, the shoe shop owner and the drug store owner as they are beyond the control of the housewife carefully counting her change.

The buying power of the grocer's dollar in the wholesale market has dropped in exactly the same proportion as everybody else's dollar; average wholesale prices are higher today than for three years.

It is inevitable that prices will continue to rise, as they must in a war or defense economy. Britain's continued absorption of a measure of our productivity will help force up the price of goods remaining for consumption here. In Washington, the effort is to set limits on civilian purchasing power in order to free goods and services for military purposes. As one economist puts it, "It's the old question of guns vs. butter."

No, the additional pennies and dollars handed the corner grocer these days won't make him rich. They'll stay in his till just about long enough to get counted. They're the same pennies and dollars that are going to pay boom time wages, to buy defense bonds, to pay ever mounting defense taxes. So when you come face to face with the high cost of living, don't blame it on the grocer. Charge it up to Uncle Sam's defense program.

If Emergency Comes

Only in the mind of the hysteria-monger is the invasion of this country, by land, air or sea, a probability.

Yet, recent unpredicable quirks of war abroad and developments at home have moved average citizens to explore the possibility. Crazier things have been tried before our very eyes in the present war.

Men whom the world calls mad, control the most colossal military machines ever known—men whose thunderous commands turn million of grim, marching troops in whatever direction their masters choose. Unbelievable feats have been attempted; some have been accomplished. And this nation has decided not to ignore such object lessons.

Most of us feel much like the brilliant young Westwood Village attorney-writer, Augusta Rosenberg, who comments: It is highly unlikely that this country will be invaded. Nevertheless, it is comforting to know that responsible public officials are aware of the problems of civilian defense during a national emergency and are taking all logical steps to meet such an emergency should it arise."

Today there is scarcely a community in the land without some form or organized "disaster control," manned by local citizens. Some, like the veterans' groups, guardsmen and first aid organizations, have existed for years. Lately, highlighted by defense developments, civilian defense councils have come into being. And today by request of the President himself men and women by the millions are learning about first aid, evacuation problems, bomb shelter work, mass feeding, mass transportation, communications, refugee care, sanitation, shelter work, ambulance driving, blackout procedure and flying.

The average citizen does not think invasion is probable in the slightest. But civilians will be prepared, in any case, to cope wth whatever emerkency may arise, and to do it intelligently, whether it be a natural disaster or a military aggression.—Contributed.

CITRUS STRIKERS MENACE VENTURA NEWSPAPER

By RALPH H. TAYLOR

Those whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad.

And now arrogant strike leaders in the citrus belt, determined to break opposition to their demands at all costs, are openly flaunting the Constitution of the United States in a brazen attempt to curb freedom of the press.

The secondary boycott, it appears, is to be invoked in an attempt to destroy the business of newspapers which oppose extreme labor action, or which offend the "little Hitlers" of the labor movement by refusing to substitute labor propaganda for unbiased news.

As Exhibit A of a labor-Hitlerism at its worst, we submit the following letter, addressed to advertisers who use the columns of the Port Hueneme Herald, a weekly newspaper in Ventura County, which apparently has offended the Agricultural and Citrus Workers Union by its handling of news in the citrus strike:

"Since the advertising of your firm is being carried on in part by the Port Huenemee Herald, which is in our opinion a Fascist and un-American filthy sheet, this local Union is herewith requesting you to withdraw your patronage from this paper. In the event you feel that you want to keep your contracts with this sheet, it will become necessary for us to notify the entire labor movement, their friends and sympathizers in Ventura County, that we consider this action on your part manifestly unfair and we will be forced to do anything in our power to have them withdraw their patronage from your firm.

"Very truly yours,
"Agricultural and Citrus Workers Union, Local 22342
"Lee Fenfro, President.
"Dallas Cisco, Financial Secretary."

There are, of course, thousands of fine, intelligent, thoroughly American labor union men, who have the good sense and fairness to recognize that labor unionism never could have been born nor have survived in this country without a free press, but there are others, apparently ,who have forgotten the Constitution and the Bill of Rights and are bringing discredit on the whole labor movement by their assault on the fundamental guarantees of our liberty.

The Oxnard Press-Courier, another Ventura County newspaper, correctly analyzes the situation when it says:

"What has been published in the Port Hueneme Herald is beside the point in this instance. The entire question is whether or not a labor union may be allowed to dictate what can be published or what cannot be published in an American newspaper. The freedom of the press has been challenged."

The Press-Courier goes further and remarks:

"If this citrus union is allowed to use threats and economic force to destroy business and industry, perhaps the great agricultural industry and other free Americans, cherishing freedom of speech, of press and of religion, may be forced to use similar economic action toward those who may or may not have courage enough to believe in freedom of the press.

"If an un-American practice can drive labor's patronage from merchants, perhaps free Americans can take their patronage to merchants who DO believe in the Bill of Rights.

Neither the press nor the farming industry has any slight desire to resort to extreme action and fight fire with fire, but unless reasonable men in the labor movement take back the reins and oust the firebrands who have resorted to the methods of Hitler and Stalin, public indignation will eventually run over and labor will pay the penalty of its own excesses.

Farmers have a right to live; newspapers have a right to live; union workers and non-union workers both have a right to live; merchants and business men have a right to live—and all have a right, in this country, to freedom of speech, a free press and freedom of worship.

No matter what the provocation, real Americans won't permit those rights to be abrogated. It is to be hoped labor's hotheads will cool off before they have done irreparable damage to labor's cause.

THINKING OUT LOUD

Planes may even become the major factor as thus far they have been in this war. We will agree that navies will assume a secondary importance, but still we maintain that land defenses can be so perfected that the striking power of armed planes will eventually be cancelled as an instrument of invasion.

AIR BATTLESHIP IS LAUNCHED

By DON WILEY

The test flight of the B-19 has aroused an extraordinary amount of public speculation about this most spectacular contribution of the California aircraft industry to national defense.

A question we've heard quite frequently of late is this:

"Is an airplane as big as the B-19 really practical? Couldn't a $16,000 pursuit plane knock this $3,000,000 giant out of the sky?

The answer to that one is: Perhaps—if a pursuit ship with guns heavy enough to disable the bomber could get close enough to hit the big ship without being knocked out first.

The likelihood of that happening is pretty remote. For the B-19 not only is the largest but certainly is the most heavily armed airplane the world has ever seen.

For obvious military reasons the Army Air Corps hasn't released any data on the B-19's armament. But recent pictures show three power-driven gun turrets—one in the nose, the others on top the fuselage between the pilot's compartment and the tail structure.

And the presence of those turrets indicates at least three quick-firing cannon—probably of 37 millimeters capable of hurling explosive shells a mile or more(though there have been entirely unconfirmed rumors of even heavier guns being designed for this ship which certainly is big enough to carry them.)

In addition, the B-19 has a tail turret and numerous other stations for heavy machine guns along the sides and bottom of the 135-foot fuselage.

Now, it is true that pursuit ships also carry cannon(though we're beginning to wonder if some of the stories coming out of Europe anent the size and number of shell guns on the newest pursuits over there aren't a trifle exaggerated). But an enemy pilot would certainly have to be in a suicidal frame of mind to try to dive through the B-19 immense superior fire power to get close enough for some really effective shooting.

In other words, the B-19 is really an air battleship, possessing something of the same superiority in fire power over a pursuit that a dreadnaught has over a destroyer. And it isn't often that you hear of a destroyer getting in close enough to sink a battleship unless the bigger ship has been disabled by the guns of another battlship.

Carrying out the comparison, it seems ligely that whenever an airplane the size of the B-19 goes on a military mission it will have a screen of escort fighters—just as a battleship is accompanied by destroyers—making the job of enemy attacks doubly difficult.

CIVILIANS WILL BE TRAINED TO DETECT PLANES

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26.—Thousands of California men and women in every section of the state will be asked to volunteer for aircraft observation duties with the General Headquarters Air Force. The preliminary organization of civilians trained in aircraft observation will be completed by June 15.

With California as the chief producer of defense aircraft, and with many of the most important training posts and air depots located in the state, it has been deemed essential by military authorities that the entire state be made aware of the importance of observation service.

These posts, organized to spot the possible enemy aircraft, will be organized under the national Division of State and Local Cooperation through local defense councils. These councils are being set up in many California communities. When the organization is complete it will be turned over to military authorities for instruction and training.

As the Greek said, many men know how to flatter; few know to praise. —Wendell Phillips.

Vacation Over Si Sofge's Cat Comes Back

H. F. (Si) Sofge, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Noble Grand Recorder of E Clampus Vitus Director of the Tahoe Pacific Highway 20 association, Mayor of Willow Valley, and Nevada City's Ambassador of Goodwill, Extraordinary, had a cat.

That is to say he had a cat last November, and to his surprise he now has the same cat in May. The cat is white. It is extremely fond of juicy young pigeons. It ate three of Si's pigeons, just as they were about ready to go into a pie. The very day that the cat ate the pigeons, Si decided, even though he and the cat were pals, that the cat would have to go. It went. It was let out of the car somewhere in the hospitable country around Roseville near another cat acting as decoy for strange cats.

Yesterday the cat came back. It mewed on the back stoop of Si's residence in Willow Valley. When Si opened the door it looked up with a happy meow and arched its back for a caress. After a good meal of bread and milk, the cat went out and began to study the pigeon situation.

MRS. HOWE ONCE DANDLED ON KNEE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Approximately 80 years ago Mrs. Euphemia Burton Howe of this city was dangled on the knee of one of America's most famous men—Abraham Lincoln.

Mrs. Howe, who has lived in Nevada City since 1907, coming here with her husband, B. F. Howe, from Illinois, treasures an ivory fan, one of two presented to her by Lincoln after he moved to Washington, D. C., following his election. The Lincoln and Burton homes adjoined.

Mrs. Howe also has a goblet from which President Lincoln drank a toast. She says there have been several collectors after both the goblet and the fan but Mrs. Howe treasures the gifts more than money.

Mrs. Howe remembers her mother telling her she was a favorite in the Lincoln household inasmuch as the Lincoln children were all boys. After Lincoln went to Washington to assume his presidential duties, the Burton family moved away.

Mr. and Mrs. Howe, esteemed residents of this city, will reach their 62nd year of married life on June 8th. For 23 years Howe was the lookout at Banner for the Tahoe National Forest.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Howe are enjoying reasonably good health for their ages.

BACK STREET TO OPEN ON LOCAL SCREEN THURS.

Two of the screen's most glamorous stars, Charles Boyer and Margaret Sullavan, have at last been teamed in the starring roles of a picture.

The picture is Universal's "Back Street," a picturization of Fannie Hurst's sensational and famous novel. It will head the bill at the Nevada Theatre starting Thursday.

Both Boyer and Miss Sullavan have often expressed the wish to co-star in a picture, but until the present, it has been found impossible to so cast them, due to the fact that one was always unavailable when the other was between pictures.

Recently, Universal Studios, to whom each of the players is under contract to do one or more pictures each year, decided to produce "Back Street", and turned the assignment over to Bruce Manning, young writer who had just been promoted to a producership. His instructions were to get the best stars available in Hollywood.

Manning then discovered that, for the first time in five years neither Boyer nor Miss Sulavan had any picture commitments which would call for their immediate services. He phoned each of them and told them what the story would be. They were delighted to play the roles of the great emotional story, and even more delighted when they learned that they were, at last, to be co-starred.

Truckee Resident Fires Bullet Through Head

Coroner A. M. Holmes has completed his investigation into the death of "Bud" Marshall, about 50, who was found in a parked automobile at Truckee Friday night with a bullet hole in his forehead and a .38 caliber revolver in his right hand.

Coroner Holmes said Marshall, an eccentric, who had been dead for about a week, no doubt shot himself. Among Marshall's possessions were seven suits of good clothes, tools, and articles of all sorts. He had been a resident of Truckee for about two years and during all that time survived by begging for meals and obtaining foods from garbage cans.

Sheriff Carl J. Tobiassen assisted Coroner Holmes in the investigation.

Mesa Verde National Park, Colorado.

The apartment house is an old idea. I've just been through one that was built a thousand years ago. Four storied and containing two hundred rooms, it is but one of an estimated four hundred major cliff dwellings that are scattered throughout the caves of this beautiful, southwestern Colorado park.

As its Spanish name implies, Mesa Verde is a broad, flat plateau perpetually green with dense forest. It is broken up by countless canyons whose perpendicular rock walls are dotted with large caves, utilized by the early Pueblo Indians as easily defended sites for their homes and villages.

In 1276 A. D. a 24-year drought set in and succeeded in accomplishing what no attacking force could have done. It drove the farming Indians out of their retreat and on into New Mexico and Arizona. Abandoned, their pueblo towns remained in quiet solitude for six long centuries. The were discovered by white men in 1888 and the surrounding 80 square miles of plateau became a National Park in 1906.

I was with the firs tgroup of visitors to enter this beautiful area for the current season—beginning the middle of May and running five months.

Entering the park from the north by excellent paved road we began to climb the imposing mesa almost immediately. A few cliff-dwellings were soon sighted, but the largest and most interesting are deep within the park.

Activity centers around Park Headquarters in the middle of the table-land, where you can loll around in the luxury of Spruce Tree Lodge, rent a cabin, or go native and camp out with what you brought with you. Accomodations are here for every taste and purse. Comparative seclusion may be found but a friendly mule deer is liable to drop in on you for a handout.

Conducted tours daily wind along the safe and well kept trails leading to the five most impressive ruins. Many other cliff-wdellings are sighted from these paths, nestled in the yawning caves across the canyons.

Many of the dwellings are in an excellent state of preservation. Most are still unexplored. Examples of the high degree of culture attained by those early builders, the stone walled apartments rise in terraced levels clear to the overhanging rock above. Four stories are common, but the slope of the caves' floors has permitted in many cases, the blocky heaps of connected chambers to ramble back and up to eight story levels. One family's front porch was another's roof. Tenants certainly enjoyed magnificent views from their parlor windows and security from the attack of hostile bands.

After a day of hiking the trails and exploring the ruins, most of us visitors gathered around the Campfire Circle on the plateau's western rim. According to eight p. m. custom a Ranger delivered an interesting discourse on the history of the area. Finally, in the light of the leaping fire, a group of Pueblo Indians gave a typical dance of their forefathers. Members of a dying race, they seemed proud to be descended from the trible that built the ingenious cliff dwellings that are today one of the major archeological preserves of the world.
